

PROSECUTION OUTLINES CASE AGAINST GRUVER

District Attorney Butt Says He Will Ask Verdict In Second Degree.

That the automobile driven by Abraham Gruver, York, was traveling at high speed when it crashed into the car driven by W. P. Strawhecker, Harrisburg, resulting in the death of Walter H. Hilner, Harrisburg, is the assertion the Commonwealth is endeavoring to prove in the second degree murder trial, now before the local court in which Gruver is the defendant.

Hilner died at the Harrisburg Hospital at 3:10 o'clock on the morning of December 8, slightly more than three hours after he suffered the fatal injuries at the so-called "death trap" at York Springs. Gruver was the driver of the car which is alleged to have struck the Harrisburg man's machine.

In presenting the Commonwealth's facts in the case, District Attorney John P. Butt told the jurors that Strawhecker's machine was struck on the left side by the defendant's car, traveling at high speed. In the accident, Strawhecker's touring car upset.

Jury Is Selected

The district attorney outlined also that the defendant was "operating his machine in a reckless manner and without due regard for the rights of other persons using the highway." It is the state's contention that Strawhecker approached the road crossing in York Springs "in a cautious manner."

"Having shown you these facts, we will ask a verdict of murder in the second degree," Prosecutor Butt concluded. The case is the first in the legal history of Adams county that a verdict of second degree murder has been sought as the result of a death occurring through the collision of two automobiles.

Selection of a jury in Gruver's case consumed slightly more than two hours, Tuesday afternoon, the last venireman selected, agreeable to both sides, being Harry Kunkle, farmer, Franklin township.

Minister On Jury

As finally selected, the jury includes a minister, two merchants, a Gettysburg College professor, proprietor of a garage, a laborer and six farmers. The jury was selected after three-fourths of the veniremen called for the January term, had been examined. Fixed opinions were given by most of the jurors who were excused. Both the prosecution and defense exercised their peremptory challenges.

Gruver, a tall, thin man, immaculately dressed, who has been out on bail since his arrest, shared the defense side of the counsel table with his attorneys, J. Donald Swope, Gettysburg, and Harvey A. Gross, York. Gruver was accompanied by a friend from York.

CONVICT TWO OF STEALING CORN

George Rodkey and Herbert Motter, Near Brushtown, Found Guilty by Jury Tuesday.

George Rodkey and Herbert Motter, both of near Brushtown, were convicted by a jury in court Tuesday afternoon of the charge of stealing between 800 and 1,000 bushels of corn from a field on the farm owned by the Littlestown Savings' Institution, formerly tenanted by Rodkey's father, William Rodkey.

The jury was given the case at 2:25 o'clock, Tuesday, and brought in its verdict of guilty at 4:07 o'clock. Three ballots were taken by the jurors, the first standing nine to three for conviction, the second eleven to one for conviction, and the third unanimously for conviction.

J. Donald Swope, attorney for the convicted defendants, filed motion of appeal, after the jury had been polled. William Hersch, attorney for the bank, conducted the prosecution of the Brushtown men, District Attorney Butt confirmed his attention to grand jury matters.

County Couple Wedded Tuesday

Mrs. Mabel Klunk Weller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Klunk, Brushtown, and M. J. Tawney, of McSherrystown, were married in St. Mary's Catholic church Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. L. A. Reudter. The attendants were Mr. Doran and Miss Adams, Westminster, Md.

Mrs. Felix Staub, McSherrystown, presided at the organ playing the wedding music. Miss Nary J. Adams, McSherrystown, sang a vocal solo, "Ave Maria." A wedding breakfast was served to a number of friends and relatives at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony.

TRUE BILLS ARE FOUND BY JURORS

Trooper Freudenberger Among Those Listed by Grand Jury, Completing Work Today.

Just before court recessed for the customary hour and a half noon adjournment today, George A. Klinge, foreman of the grand jury, brought in a true bill in the assault and battery action against C. W. Freudenberger, a state trooper, formerly stationed here.

During the noon recess, Mr. Klinge announced that the grand jury had completed its disposition of bills presented to it by District Attorney John P. Butt. Not a single bill in the large list given to the grand jury, was ignored by that body, true bills having been returned in all cases.

When court convened at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, the grand jurors were sent on inspection trips to the county home and county jail.

Other Indictments

In addition to the true bill returned in Trooper Freudenberger's case, other indictments were passed upon as follows:

William Patterson, illegal possession of liquor; John Miller, illegal possession of liquor; Harry Cook, illegal possession of liquor; Joseph Hoffman, illegal possession and transportation of liquor; Hayes Groft and J. G. "Jug" Groft, illegal sale and possession of liquor; John Schuyler, operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor; Charles W. Myers, murder, illegal possession and transportation of liquor, and operating car while under the influence of liquor; Harry Weiner, illegal use of elevator after notice had been given by the state department of labor and industry, and Abraham M. Gruver, murder.

Plan Program At County Church Sunday Evening

The teachers' training class of the Wrentham Methodist Episcopal church, having completed its course of study, will hold its commencement exercises Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock. If the weather is unfavorable, the exercises will be held at the same hour two weeks later, February 14. The meeting is open to the public.

The following program will be given: Opening address, Miss Myrtle Wenk, teacher; singing by class; recitation, "The Four Calls," Mrs. Julia Showers; duet, Miss Grace Wenk and Mrs. Emmert Warren; reading, "The Teacher and Methods of Teaching," Mrs. Hermie Taylor; music, "Gleanings from the Bible," Miss Grace Wenk and Miss Gretta Black; singing by class; essay, "The Sunday School, Its Beginning, Development and Purpose," Mrs. Guy Wenk; duet, Miss Stella Wolff and Mrs. Emmert Warren; address by the pastor, Rev. J. Resler Shultz; presentation of diplomas by superintendent, and singing by the class.

Silk Plant Gives $2500 To Charity

The C. K. Eagle Silk company of Shamokin, operating a branch plant in Gettysburg, has announced it will give $100 a day for four weeks to aid destitute families in the striking coal region. The total gift will amount to $2500. The money will go to the Chamber of Commerce relief station, which has fed more than 3500 persons since it was opened two weeks ago. The Eagle firm has been very liberal in charity work in Shamokin.

MARYLANDER IS CERTAIN COACH IS "ORIGINAL"

P. W. T. Loy, Hagerstown Asserts He Is Satisfied Of Authenticity.

"In my personal opinion there is no doubt whatever, but what the old coach now in question is the one with the historic connection," writes P. W. T. Loy, of Hagerstown, relative to the authenticity of the coach now in the Port Covington railroad yards of the Western Maryland railroad, being the same coach that Abraham Lincoln rode in when he dedicated the National Cemetery here in 1863.

Mr. Loy, son of the late Irvin W. Loy, declares that his father was for forty years prior to 1910, "foreman of bridges and buildings of the railway line," and that his recollections are that the coach in question is the same one that the martyred president rode in on his trip from Washington to Gettysburg.

Mr. Loy's communication to a local man follows:

Dear Sir:

"Some time ago, I gave you facts which I think can be authenticated and came down to me through a channel which I believe was thoroughly reliable.

"During the late J. M. Hood's presidency of the Western Maryland Railway, there was a conductor, old in the service and who like the late J. M. Hood, served in the army of the Confederacy, this conductor being a very popular man along the line and whose name was Cooksey.

Father Worked for W. M.

"After General Hood became president of the Western Maryland Railway, Cooksey entered the service and became in the course of time, a passenger conductor. My father, the late Irvin W. Loy, was for about 40 years prior to 1910, foreman of bridges and buildings of the railway line, his position being one that took him all over the railway lines and throwing him in very intimate contact with Conductor Cooksey, who had been in the Battle of Gettysburg and who frequently told my father many incidents in connection therewith. These incidents were in turn repeated by my father to me and it was through this channel that the story came down that the railway coach in question was the one in which President Lincoln rode.

LOCAL GIRL IS MARRIED TODAY

Miss Ruth Miriam Stock and Edward M. McCarthy Are Married at Nuptial Mass This Morning.

Miss Ruth Miriam Stock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Stock, Baltimore street, and Edward M. McCarthy, son of Mrs. Winifred McCarthy, Philadelphia, were married at a nuptial mass at 7:30 o'clock this morning in St. Francis Xavier church, the Rev. Father Mark E. Stock officiating.

Miss Anna McCarthy, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and Frank J. McCarthy, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Only the families and immediate friends of the couple were present for the ceremony.

The bride wore a velvet dress with picture hat to match. She is a graduate of St. Francis Xavier parochial school, class of 1918, and for the past seven years has been employed in the insurance office of Miss Mary Ramer.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the Catholic High School, Philadelphia, class of 1921. He is employed in the Broad Street Terminal Offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Philadelphia.

Leave On Honeymoon

A wedding breakfast was served immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Her father, Peter C. Stock, is president of Gettysburg's town council. After the wedding breakfast, the newlyweds left from Harrisburg on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Pittsburgh.

Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will be at home at 717 North 20th street, Philadelphia, after May 1. Mrs. McCarthy will return to Gettysburg after the wedding trip to help Miss Ramer over the busy April 1 period.

Music for the ceremony was furnished by Charles W. Stock, Broadway, who sang several appropriate selections, while Miss Mary Ramer presided at the organ.

Board Commutes Death Sentence of Boy Slayer

William Cavalier, 15-year-old slayer of his aged grandmother, is given life imprisonment by the state board of pardons.

YOUNG CAVALIER ESCAPES CHAIR

State Board of Pardons Commutes Death Sentence to Life Imprisonment; 15 Years Old.

Harrisburg, Jan. 27.—William C. Cavalier, the Schuylkill county boy who in 1924, when he was only 14, shot and killed his grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Cavalier, will spend the remainder of his life in prison. His death sentence was commuted Tuesday by the state board of pardons, the action setting aside the warrant of Governor Pinchot for his execution, which was scheduled for next Monday.

The case of the Schuylkill boy attracted nation-wide attention. Overgrown and underdeveloped mentally, he has stoically accepted his fate from the start, and his attitude created sympathy among many persons who contended that if Loeb and Leopold, mentally alert, could escape execution, the Cavalier boy's life should be spared.

The board and Governor Pinchot were deluged with petitions signed by thousands of persons and by letters from all parts of the United States asking for clemency.

Cavalier, whose real name is William C. Yost, was reared by his grandmother, from the time he was 7 weeks old. His father and mother separated, his mother remarrying later. The murder of the grandmother was brutal, the boy sending many shots into her body. The crime was committed to obtain money for a motion-picture show. He went to the show immediately after committing the deed. The state police later found $50 he had stolen.

WORK OUT FINAL PLANS FOR DINNER

Having secured the Hotel Gettysburg for the occasion, plans are rapidly being worked out for the reception and luncheon at which Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor, will be the guest of honor, and principal speaker, at 1 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, February 13.

This was announced today by Mrs. M. A. Zeigler, chairman of the committee making plans for the public reception and luncheon.

In announcing selection of the Hotel Gettysburg for the affair, Mrs. Zeigler said speakers for the occasion would be announced later, but that Mrs. Pinchot would deliver the main address.

The luncheon will be open to men and women and tickets may be secured from members of the Adams County Republican Women's Club sponsors of the affair. Since the reception and luncheon are open to both men and women, it is expected that persons of all political affiliations will attend.

Assisting Mrs. Zeigler in arranging for the event are Miss Reba Adams, Mrs. N. L. Minter, Mrs. Ralph Wierman and Mrs. S. E. Swope.

99 FULL-TIME GUIDES GIVEN '26 LICENSES

Three Are Granted Part-time Privileges By Superintendent Storrick.

Ninety-nine active, full-time guides and three part-time guides have been licensed for 1926 by William Storrick, superintendent of guides, who made public the new list today.

W. Preston Hull, Chambersburg street, has been added as a full-time guide to fill the vacancy caused by the death last year of J. C. Wierman, York street.

Vacancies caused by the suspension of Zenas Collins and Sverre Sorensen, have been filled by Mr. Storrick by the licensing of Robert J. Bollinger and Charles H. Stevens, who will be allowed to conduct tourists over the battlefield beginning Memorial Day, May 29.

Two Substitutes

Two of the 1925 guides are confined to their homes by illness. They are James E. McDonnell and Daniel E. Shealer. Mr. Storrick has renewed their licenses, but substituted for them Harry E. Bumbaugh and Edmund Rosensteel. If McDonnell and Shealer are able to return to their duties as guides this year, their substitutes will be compelled to relinquish their badges, according to Mr. Storrick. Bumbaugh and Rosensteel also are to start their work May 29.

The license of Joseph T. Galbraith, which had been withdrawn, has been renewed, and Earl Reinecker and Thomas Rosensteel added to the list of part-time guides. Galbraith, Reinecker and Rosensteel are to begin on Saturdays, Sunday and holidays their duties May 29, and operate only thereafter.

Active Guides

The complete list of full-time guides follows:

Herbert P. Allison, William H. Allison, William F. Abell, William J. Abell, James F. Abell, Rufus H. Bushman, Ralph Butt, Amos Butt, C. L. Butt, Moses Bair, Homer Buohl, C. J. Breighner, Oliver W. County Pastor Receives Coupe From Congregation

The members of St. Joseph's parish, Bonneville, presented their pastor, the Rev. M. Scanlon, with a coupe at a meeting which was held in the parish hall, Bonneville, Monday evening. The formal presentation was made by Emory M. Goulden, chairman of the meeting, and came as a complete surprise to Father Scanlon. He responded in fitting manner.

Other members of the parish who spoke were H. E. Melhorn, Lewis Wagaman and L. Clayton Myers. The priests who were present also contributed to the program with speeches. Those present included the Rev. R. H. McLaughlin, McSherrystown; the Rev. W. J. Burke, Hanover; the Rev. Mark McElwee, Conewago; the Rev. W. A. Boyle, St. Patrick's church, York, and the Rev. E. O. Flynn, Littlestown. A musical program and the serving of refreshments followed.

While Father Scanlon was in Harrisburg last Friday the new coupe was placed in his garage where he found it upon his return. The formal presentation, however, did not take place until Monday evening.

We are prepared to install an Atwater Kent Radio in your home and guarantee a wonderful concert every night; price complete, installed, is $150 on agreement plan. We furnish everything. Nace's Music Stores, exclusive Atwater Kent dealers.

Twelve-Year Old Girl Dies of Burns When Coal Oil Can Explodes at Home of Sister

Two Others Also Burned, One Seriously; Youngster Was In Act Of Pouring Coal Oil On Stove-fire, Apparently Dormant, When Can Explodes; Dies In Few Hours.

Three persons were burned, one fatally, when a 12-year-old girl poured coal oil on a stove fire at the home of Roy Breighner, Tyrone township, near Heidersburg, Tuesday evening.

Miss Edith R. Poole, 12, died at midnight of the burns she suffered in the accident, after running from the Breighner home to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Poole, 600 feet distant, her clothing afire and her agonizing screams of pain piercing the air.

Mrs. Breighner, who was sitting in a chair directly in front of the stove when the coal oil can, in the girl's hands, exploded, was seriously, and perhaps fatally burned, despite the efforts of her husband to beat out the flames which had enveloped her.

Mr. Breighner, a prominent young farmer of Tyrone township, near Heidersburg, suffered numerous burns about the hands, arms and face. His condition is said not to be serious.

Pours Oil On Fire

Miss Poole, a sister of Mrs. Breighner, went to the Breighner home, Tuesday evening, for a short visit. While there, it was noticed that the wood fire in a stove in one of the rooms seemed low.

The younger woman procured a can of coal oil and began pouring part of the contents on the apparently dormant fire in an effort to arouse it. Live coals beneath the dead-looking surface of the stove's contents blazed up. In an instant, the stream of coal oil from the spout of the can was a torch, followed by an explosion as the remaining contents of the oil exploded.

Miss Poole dropped the badly-rent can, burning oil splattering over her sister, Mrs. Breighner, and over the carpet in the vicinity of the stove.

Collapses At Home

Frightened, her clothing afire and screaming pitifully, the young girl ran from the Breighner home to her own home where she collapsed. The flames, which had burned most of her clothing from her body, were extinguished.

Deep burns covered most of the young girl's body, and it is believed she inhaled some of the flames, which hastened her death. A physician was summoned and everything possible was done to relieve the suffering of the girl.

Immediately after the explosion, Mr. Breighner seized a blanket and beat out the flames which had set fire to his wife's clothing. Her clothing, however, was partly burned off, and late Tuesday night and early this morning, she was in a serious condition. Mrs. Breighner is about 27 years old.

Funeral On Friday

Except for a broken window pane, which was shattered by the explosion, little damage was done to the Breighner home, the burning oil which had set fire to the carpet in the vicinity of the stove having been beat out by Mr. Breighner.

The young victim of the tragedy is survived by her parents, and two sisters, Mrs. Breighner and Mrs. Eckert, both of Tyrone township.

Funeral services Friday morning, meeting at the house at 9:30 o'clock, with further services from the Heidersburg Lutheran church, the Rev. J. Harold Little officiating. Interment at Heidersburg.

Special Services Close Tuesday

Forty hours devotion closed at Paradise Protectors chapel Tuesday evening with the usual ceremonies. Priests present included: The Rev. Dr. L. A. Reudter, the Rev. R. H. McLaughlin and the Rev. Leo B. Kirchner, McSherrystown; the Rev. E. O. Flynn, Littlestown; the Rev. M. Scanlon, Bonneville; the Rev. William Huygen, the Rev. Verne James A. Huber and the Rev. W. J. Burke, Hanover; the Rev. Mark E. Stock, Gettysburg; the Rev. George Brown and the Rev. W. A. Boyle, York; the Rev. George L. Rice, New Oxford; the Rev. Brendan O'Callaghan and the Rev. Fintan Roche, Paradise.

Beaded Bag, Lost On Bus Is Found

A small beaded bag, lost at Christmastime on a Gettysburg-Harrisburg bus, was recovered this week and returned to the owner, a young Pittsburg girl, who visited in Gettysburg over the holidays. The bag contained a small silver necklace, purchased in Germany, and highly prized by the owner. This was intact, as were the other contents, when the bag was recovered.

LOCAL JURIST TO SIT IN FRANKLIN

Judge Watson R. Davison opened his first regular session as president judge of the courts of Franklin county Tuesday morning when the January session of orphans court convened. A number of matters of minor importance were handled by the court Tuesday, no cases of import were heard.

Due to his being an interested party in some of the cases listed, prior to his election, Judge Davison will be unable to hear a number of cases listed on the orphans court calendar. These will be heard by Judge McPherson of the Adams-Fulton county circuit early in February.

Meanwhile Judge Davison will hear such cases as he may legally handle and endeavor to finish up as much work as possible prior to the opening of the common pleas session on Monday, February 1.

The calendar for this session is quite crowded and predictions are being made that it will be necessary to hold over a number of cases and hear them at a special session which would probably be called early in March.

A., whose subject will be "The Relation of Father and Son in the Business of Christian Life;" Doctor Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College, who will speak on "What Kind of Education Shall We Give Our Boys?" and by Doctor J. A. Singmaster, president of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary, whose topic will be "The Challenge of the Christian Ministry to the Youth of Our Church."

The affair is one of a series of Fathers' and Sons' banquets planned by the syndical committee for work among boys of which Rev. O. C. Dean, of Hanover, is chairman.

George Black, John Bream, John Colestock, Floyd Hartman and Professor H. Milton Roth is the committee in charge of Friday night's banquet.

DECKS CLEARED FOR CONFERENCE

(By Associated Press.)

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—Anthracite miners and operators once more had a clean slate before them today in their efforts to reach a settlement of the 22 weeks' old strike. The latest plan to solve the industrial warfare, that proposed by the Scranton Times, was knocked in the head by operators when negotiations were resumed yesterday after the break-up of the conference in New York earlier in the month.

Plan after plan has been proposed and rejected. Apparently the conference are as far apart as they were when the original negotiations for a new contract were disrupted in Atlantic City last summer.

Spokesmen for both sides declined to hazard a guess as to what would be discussed at this afternoon's conference.

SOLONS RESPECT LATE J. P. HARRIS

(By Associated Press.)

Harrisburg, Jan. 27.—Members of the legislature in special session at the call of Governor Pinchot today faced a brief session. The sudden death last night of Senator John P. Harris, Allegheny, caused legislative leaders to plan a session of sufficient length to adopt a resolution to adjourn until Monday night at 9 p. m. out of respect for the senator.

Virtually the only work which confronted the members today were public hearings on the prohibition enforcement and mining bills. They were cancelled automatically and the date for the hearing on enforcement bills was set for ten o'clock Tuesday morning.

Further hearings today are pending on the election reform and giant power bills which were discussed yesterday.

Aviator's Helper Freezes To Death

New Orleans, Jan. 26.—Death and youth battled in the trackless marshes at the mouth of the Mississippi river Sunday night and death won by claiming the life of Charles Lanoux, Jr., 21 years old, aviator helper, who froze in the marshes. He died after his pilot, Henry Ransdell, had lunched through the morass for more than an hour with the exhausted youth on his back. The pair had been forced down by an empty gasoline tank.

Lanoux and Ransdell were employed by the New Orleans air line, engaged in carrying United States mails from New Orleans to Pilot Town and return.

WOOD DENIES CHARGES

(By Associated Press.)

Havana, Jan. 27.—Osborne Wood, son of the Governor of Philippines, at the hotel Seville-Biltmore today said he knew nothing of charges against him of having passed worthless checks in Florida and declared he would go immediately to Palm Beach to straighten out matters.

READY FOR COURT VOTE

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Jan. 27.—The Senate squashed away today for its decision whether the United States shall sit with the World Court at Geneva. There appeared little likelihood that the resolution of adherence would fail to receive the necessary two-thirds majority.

SUSPENDED AIR OFFICER QUILTS

Colonel Mitchell Resigns From Service; Expects to Accept Lecture Engagement.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Jan. 27.—Colonel William Mitchell resigned from the Army today.

The convicted air officer under sentence of five years suspension because of his criticism of government aviation policies put his resignation in this single sentence.

"I hereby tender my resignation as an officer of the United States Army to take effect February 1, 1926."

The letter was dated today and addressed to the adjutant general of the Army.

Whether the resignation will be accepted has not been fully developed. Some Army precedents indicate that in the case of such withdrawal from the Army the clause "for the good of the service" must be incorporated.

Final decision will rest with President Coolidge who two days ago approved with modification the sentence of the court martial.

It is the belief of Colonel Mitchell's friends that if he is permitted to step out of the Army he will accept an offer to continue on the lecture platform his crusade for a reorganization of the national defenses.

MARSHALL HELD WITHOUT BAIL ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—David L. Marshall today was formally held without bail for the action of the coroner charged with the murder of Miss Anna May Dietrich. He was given a hearing before Magistrate F. T. Carney at the 20th street police station which was surrounded by several thousand persons eager to get a glimpse of the man who confessed killing the woman and dismembering her body.

Marshall was not represented by counsel. Throughout the proceedings he stood with hanging head. When told he might cross-examine the witness he said, "I haven't a thing to say."

Marshall was taken into the police station through a rear entrance and few in the crowd outside got sight of him.

superior court after the boy's conviction, and the verdict of the lower court was sustained. Pressure to save the boy's life after his death sentence was pronounced May 18, 1925, was centered on the state board of pardons.

Pottsville, Jan. 27.—When word was received here Tuesday afternoon that the sentence of William Cavalier, 15-year-old murderer, had been committed to life imprisonment, almost at once Cavalier received an intimation of the action, although he will not be officially notified until later.

The boy showed no emotion whatever, taking the action as a matter of course. He had repeatedly predicted the decision. "When will I be taken to Philadelphia?" he asked.

Public sentiment, while abhorring the terrible crime of Cavalier, approves of the action of the board. Cavalier killed his grandmother, but statements that have come to light of late that several times he lay in ambush, with an idea of killing prominent citizens, have prevented any sympathy for him.

PROSECUTION

at 4:45 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, after the district attorney had briefly outlined the Commonwealth's position.

Only one of the prosecutor's list of 24 witnesses was heard before court adjourned for the day at 5 o'clock, Tuesday evening, although two other witnesses were called, but were excused when it became apparent to the court that there was insufficient time to hear the testimony of either.

Doctor Testifies

Dr. C. P. Swett, a physician at the Harrisburg Hospital, who was on duty when Hilner was admitted, was the only witness to give testimony before court adjourned. He told of Hilner's injuries, saying the man suffered a compound fracture of the skull, numerous lacerations and contusions. He was permitted to leave the stand without being cross-examined by defense counsel.

Strawhecker, driver of the car in which Hilner was riding, was next called, but Attorney Swope protested that inasmuch as he was probably one of the most important witnesses the prosecutor would call, he wished more time to cross-examine him than would be given before adjournment. The court sustained the defense counsel, and Lester S. Miller, a surveyor in the local state highway department office, was next called, but court adjourned for the day without giving him an opportunity to testify. He had prepared a map of the intersection of the Gettysburg-Harrisburg and Carlisle-Hampton roads, and was the first witness called to the stand when court convened this morning.

Other prosecution witnesses called to the stand before noon were Vernon G. Anderson, W. P. Strawhecker, Tyson Tipton, W. F. Hoy, Frank J. Kemper, Lewis Waller, W. Ira Killhefer.

The jurors are:
C. W. Cook, merchant, Gettysburg.
John F. Dick, farmer, Cumberland township.
Roy S. Foulk, laborer, Mt. Joy township.
George H. Hare, farmer, Cumberland township.
William F. Irvin, farmer, Franklin township.
Harry Kunkle, farmer, Franklin township.
Charles C. Mackley, farmer, Mt. Joy township.
R. K. Major, farmer, Straban township.
Clarence A. Ott, merchant, Gettysburg.
N. K. Stonesifer, merchant, Hamiltontown township.
Dr. A. E. Wagner, minister, Gettysburg.
Dr. John B. Zinn, professor, Gettysburg.

MERCHANT SHOT BY THREE GUNMEN

(By Associated Press.)

Uniontown, Jan. 27.—Harry F. Miller, proprietor of a confectionary store, near here was shot and killed in an encounter with three gunmen early today. Homer Miller, a son, was struck over the head when he went to his father's assistance. The slayers escaped in an automobile.

Miller was struck down when he opened the door in answer to a summons. As he fell several shots were fired. He arose and struggled with his assailant who continued firing. Police believe robbery was the motive.

PRINCE'S HORSE DIES

(By Associated Press.)

London, Jan. 27.—The Prince of Wales' horse dropped dead under him today while the Prince was hunting. The Prince was not injured.

Prosecute Men Who Attacked Yank Seamen

Tokio, Jan. 27.—An official report to the Foreign Office from the governor of Hokkaido confirmed press reports of the killing of John R. Vernon, an American stoker of the steamer West O'Rowa, who died after being clubbed by a mob of Japanese.

The official report asserted that Vernon had been drinking and the captain of the West O'Rowa absolved the Japanese from blame. The mob is said to have attacked Vernon after he had struck an interpreter with whom he had quarreled.

Police Investigate Incident

The governor's report said that the police were investigating the incident and intended to prosecute Vernon's attackers. Vernon's American residence is not known here and the American Consul has been telegraphed to make a complete report of the affair.

Conflict In Names

Reports from Tokio yesterday reported John Burnham, stoker on the West O'Rowa, as being killed by a mob of Japanese at Hokkaido. Later reports from the owners of the vessel at Portland, Oregon, identified the mob's victim as John R. Vernon.

20 Years For Killing American

Bourges, France, Jan. 27.—Louis Lafaire, a sailor, was sentenced to twenty years' penal servitude and twenty years' banishment for the murder of Gerald Harvey, an American army sergeant, whose body was found at Mehun-sur-Yevre in July, 1919. Lafaire confessed that he struck Sergeant Harvey with a boat hook and finished him in a struggle in a canal.

McCray Told To File Petition

Washington, Jan. 27.—Before President Coolidge would be inclined to consider clemency for former Governor McCray, of Indiana, now in the Atlanta Penitentiary, it will be necessary for McCray to submit a new petition pointing out that ill health justifies his release.

The attitude of the president was disclosed Tuesday at the White House, where it was pointed out that the petition for clemency, already submitted and on which the Department of Justice looks with disfavor, did not include the health of the prisoner as one of the grounds for commutation of sentence. McCray is reported to be suffering from high blood pressure.

Ponzi Associated Is Found Guilty

Boston, Jan. 27.—Caledonio Alviti, associate of Charles Ponzi, get-rich-quick promoter, in his Florida land sale scheme, was found guilty of violating the Massachusetts blue-sky law. He was sentenced in municipal court to six months in the house of correction, appealed and was released in $1,000 bail.

G-BURG SHOOTERS RATE HIGH IN U. S.

Five Members of Local Gun Club Break Ninety Per Cent of Targets During Year.

Averages for the year, just released at national trapshooting headquarters in Vandalia, Ohio, show that local men established excellent scores at registered targets. Five local club members broke ninety per cent or better of all targets recorded, which is a fine showing, and one that local men are proud of. Robert Bell is again leader, with an average of .9390, the records indicating that Bell shot at 1500 targets. Incidentally his score places him among the first ten Pennsylvania experts, Steve Crothers leading the state. Other local averages are: Gentzler .9290, Bostwick .9257, Bair .9009, Wert 9000, Mittinger .8895, Cromer .8814, Miller .8350, E. Plank .7907, Stallsmith .7410, and Rosensteel .7400.

When it is considered that most of the locals shot at registered targets for the first time last year, the figures above will give a good idea of how quickly Adams county gunners took to the sport, and there is little question that the coming season will show improvement in each case.

Captains of the Red, White and Blue teams have announced that every thing is in readiness for the first of the team races beginning on Saturday, and it is probable that several out-of-town squads will be present, inquiries having been received from the Harrisburg and York clubs.

Max Williams, who for many years has been identified with the local club as an officer, will be in charge of the start on Saturday, and will appoint referees, scorers and other field officials.

61 INDICTED IN RUM CONSPIRACY

Government Strikes Greatest Blow Against Dry Law Violators: Guardsmen Included.

New York, Jan. 27.—The federal government struck a herculean blow at rum running on the high seas, bootlegging ashore and bribery of government employees.

Sixty-one men, including thirteen members and former members of the Coast Guard, were indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiracy and violation of the national prohibition law. A second indictment charged William V. Dwyer, former race-track owner and alleged head of the biggest liquor syndicate in this country, and ten of his high-up confederates with bribery of government employees.

Dwyer and one of his lieutenants, John J. McCambridge, were charged with violation of the national prohibition laws in a third indictment alleging that they sent twelve men to their deaths in an unseaworthy ship on a mission in the rum trade. Dwyer is named in all three indictments.

The syndicate, international in scope, was termed the "backbone of rum row," and was alleged to have operated eighteen ocean-going steamers in the liquor trade. It was represented as a "$25,000,000 bootleg ring," with headquarters in New York.

Among those indicted for conspiracy and violation of the prohibition laws were C. Paul Chartier, Canadian, represented as the head of one of the biggest liquor-distributing companies in Canada; Lou Itzkovitch, described as the syndicate's purchasing agent in London; Walter L. Vandye, alleged purchasing agent for the ring in Canada, with offices in Montreal, and Edward Caperton, aviator, charged with having piloted airplanes over rum row to direct liquor ships in their unloading.

The action of the grand jury, characterized by federal officials as the most extensive court action ever instituted against prohibition law violators, followed six weeks of continuous investigation.

Indict Boy For Triple Slaying

Yallville, Ark., Jan. 27.—Arnold Comer, 14, alleged slayer of Charles Moore, fur trader; Mrs. Sarah Boyd and Mrs. Boyd's infant granddaughter, was indicted by the Marion grand jury on a charge of murder.

Comer, mountain youth, is alleged to have confessed to the triple slaying, which took place early in December last. He was arrested after a chase through the mountains and, officers say, admitted not only the killing of the three persons, but of wounding a man in the Buffalo Creek community.

The boy, police say, was seeking food and money when he appeared at the Boyd farmhouse, but is said to have given no reason for the slaying of the aged woman. He was quoted as saying he killed the baby because it cried, and Moore because he thought he was after him.

Butler.—Marking the spot where George Washington was fired upon by Indians while returning from the French forts of Venango (Franklin) and LeBoeuf (Waterford) on the evening of December 27, 1753, the Richard Butler chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution has erected a tablet on the top of Buhl's hill.

DOOMED MAN'S WIFE CONFESSES

In An Effort to Save Her Husband From Death Sentence; Says She Killed Constable.

Greenville, S. C., Jan. 27.—Mrs. Holland Pittman, who Monday night confessed to the slaying of Constable J. H. Howard on January 1, 1924, for which her husband and father-in-law are under sentence to die, stated Tuesday that she was anxious to go to trial as soon as possible.

The confession was made when she was informed that the State Supreme Court had refused a new trial for the two men. She has not been arrested and Sheriff Sam D. Willis was non-committal Tuesday when asked if he intended to place the woman in jail.

Shot To Defend Pittman, Claim. "I shot him because I believed he was going to kill Holland," Mrs. Pittman said. She added that Alexander Pittman, her father-in-law, was not present.

Mrs. Pittman asserted that she was not making the confession merely because one of the doomed men is her husband.

Says He Wouldn't Let Her Confess. "I wanted to tell it from the first, but Holland wouldn't let me. He kept saying that the courts would not let an innocent man die. I have lived in misery for two years that no one can picture. Now I am glad to get it off my heart. I don't care what they do with me. I would be just as well off dead or alive. But I want to die."

How Skinny Kids Gain Weight and Strength

Everyone knows that Cod Liver Oil is full of vitamins, is a flesh builder supreme. In children where rickets are suspected it even helps to build up the bones and strengthens the body. But let us all be glad! The poor underweight, sickly, puny kids do not have to take the vile, nasty, oil itself any more for thanks to science McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets has taken its place.

Sugar coated they are and as easy to take as candy and if you will give them to your sickly child for thirty days, you'll be very happy indeed.

If you are not, People's Drug Store or the drugist from whom you bought them is authorized to return your money. 60 tablets 60 cents—but be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine.—adv.

CHAPTER XVI. (Continued)

In America they are rarely accomplished. The demimondaine of Paris and the diplomat from London are not unaccustomed to ignoring the barrier between them when occasion arises. It is an extraordinary hostess, in America, who can successfully bring together all grades of society, not rich and poor, so much, as the good and the not so good.

Yvonne Coutant was one of these. She had no scruples when she opened her house, as to who came into it. She demanded only beauty, external grace, and a willingness to be an appropriate picture for the shining, golden frame she provided.

"One simply cannot afford not to be in on one of Yvonne's affairs," Mrs. Brownie-Smith, of the Polo crowd, repeatedly said. "One's husband is sure to be there, and so is his favorite of the moment. I always go in order to discover who Tom's loving now. It's the only way I have of checking up on the fluctuations of his taste."

"Yvonne's own latest former husband, Alfred Coutant, the novelist, never missed her entertainments. I get at least four chapters from every one of them," he would explain. "She's awfully good to let me come—sort of jolly like, you know."

So it was that an interesting company moved about among the roses and lilies and daffodils that filled every corner of the spacious house with fragrant baskets of thick, flaming carnations relieving the paleness of the throats of women. And so it was that Joanna stood, arms outstretched that she might realize the line and symmetry of them, before the long mirror in her dressing room, upstairs. The slim body of her was vibrant with memories of the day and eagerness for the night. In her eyes were all the ecstasies. Striven around her were the things from the shops—more gorgeous things from more gorgeous shops than she, alone, ever could have discovered. It was from them she had made her choice—or Yvonne had made it for her—and she stood, before the glass, a soft, melting vision of lace and chiffons fashioned by deft fingers and cunning brains to emphasize that beauty of girlhood that only a sculptor could display more alluringly or frankly. On the dressing table before her were spread the souvenirs of an hour, with Yvonne in the great jewelry store, wristlets of diamonds, rubies and sapphires; necklaces of platinum chains, as thin as the sheerness of lingerie, with shining gems in their delicate pendants.

From all of these Yvonne had chosen a single ornament, a rope of shimmering pearls that would once around the slender, partly veiled neck.

"Miss Twenty-seven of the Silks" had completed her transition and awaited her summons into the magic world below—the magic world where money bought a smile or a kiss bought pearls like hers.

While Joanna stood before her mirror, Andrew Eggleston sat at the long, carved table in the sombre-toned library of his house—which was not of the Avenue, but still on it, a stubborn ghost of the days when the Avenue was jealous of its exclusive rank. Joanna's eyes crossed the lovelessness her mirror reflected; a lovelessness that, as in alabaster dust, all the pretenses of her kind. Her face tingled with the promise of adventures. Dimples danced their provocation about her mouth. Through the filmy web of chiffons youthful limbs were mocked at the cunningness of the couturier's mask for them; gold brown hair, hugged close to the restless head, delicately arched eyebrows shaped as only a painter could conceive them—lips and arms and bare shoulders made a marvelous ensemble of enticement.

Andrew Eggleston, in the heavy library room, also eyed a vision—also the figure of a girl, and of Joanna's age—but of a long time ago. The girl the banker watched looked down at him from a canvas, held in its massive frame over the great fireplace. There was no dancing in her eyes, but a wistfulness that seemed to reach out to the man who gazed like a quivering beam of mellow radiance. The lips were blood red, and full, and shaped for a kiss, but they were not scarlet, nor voluptuous. They were as if there was no such a thing as a lip stick. The hair was brown, shimmering, as Joanna's, but it was not bobbed—but piled in glorious opulence.

The banker, who would have been young when this girl in the gold frame was young, passed his hand across his brow, to break a spell with which the girl in the painting encompassed him. Then his attention fell to bits of paper spread before him like the jewels on Joanna's dressing table. One by one he picked them up and read them—read the cancelled checks which signified the purchases Joanna had made that day, checked so that had been hurriedly cashed so the girl might take her purchases away with her. They totalled thousands, many thousands. At the jewelry store alone Joanna had spent more than a tenth of her million dollars. It was all tallied in the cancelled checks.

"The play begins!" It is to be a comedy, after all. It was said quietly, evenly, but there was just a nuance in the tone that might have been repressed exultation. The speaker stood behind the banker, a figure in faultless evening clothes, silk hatted, white gloved. About his lips played the wrath of a smile—a cynical smile. In his eyes there was amusement. Just at that moment an ancient butler appeared at the library door and spoke:

"Your car has arrived, Mr. Brandon."

Eggleston started. "You will be seeing her, tonight, then?" he asked calmly.

"Yes. She will be plunged into the abyss tonight, by her new friend, Yvonne Coutant. She will swim like a sinuous mermaid through the sordid senses of half a score of old men whose lips she'll moisten with the sight of her, and half a hundred young men who will make wagers as to which will be first to break her. The end is in sight tonight."

The people in the great room below were waiting for her, Joanna, their faces uplifted.

Eggleston did not reply for a moment. He raised his glance again, to the girl in the painting. Then he said, heavily:

"Still, I'd like to see her—here, in this room. Arrange, some way, to bring her tomorrow."

Brandon bowed slightly, and went out of the room and to his car which waited at the curb. He gave his order briefly: "To Miss Coutant's."

Meanwhile Joanna, before her mirror, waited to be summoned to the old men and the young men, and their young women and old, downstairs.

Yvonne appeared in the doorway. The younger girl gave a little gasp when she saw her. In contrast to the soft white tones of Joanna's gown, Yvonne's was a shining black velvet that clung to the curve of her figure like a sheath, giving her volcanic hair its complement. Her shoulders and uncovered back shone boldly and glittering white.

"You will be something of a sensation, tonight, my dear!" the older woman exclaimed, when Joanna had walked across the room, and had whirled and stood still for her inspection. Joanna was much too happy to reply.

Yvonne's appearance among her guests was the signal for dancing to begin—also for the breaking down of all barriers built by formalities. Women who had gathered in stiff little groups to discuss other women or to despise away to their first dance and their first drink and the first round of their preferred flirtations. The big drawing room had been made into a dancing room. In the winter garden the only lights were flickering lanterns hidden among the foliage. Great palms made screens across corners of the drawing and sitting rooms, and in the hallways.

"Yvonne," said Mrs. Brownie-Smith, "knows that two people never have to fumble for conversation when they're hidden behind palms."

As Yvonne moved through her rooms, with a word here and a nod there, her eyes sought a single face. When she failed to find it she spoke to the butler who stood at the post in the reception hall. The man gave her the information she sought.

"Mr. Brandon just arrived, Madame."

him, yielding, expectant. But she read in his face that he would not take her in his arms. She would immediately self-possessed. Gayly she fluttered her fingers across her own lips and then touched them, lightly, to his. "Am I pleasing to my lord?" she demanded, dropping him a mock curtsy.

"That's an idle pretense, that question," he replied. "What you really want to know is, are you tempting?"

"A woman never asks that," she returned. "She needs no help to satisfy any such curiosity."

"I fancy that point might be argued," he observed, "but we will compromise. You are very beautiful, which pleases me, and very alluring, which gratifies you. What more shall either of us desire?"

Some quick reply, perhaps a reminder of some sort, hovered at her lips, but died unspoken. "Nothing else," she said, "and thank you. If I have done my own attraction justice perhaps you will agree that I have done even more—that I have made two women beautiful, tonight, for your satisfaction."

"You mean the girl, of course. But why are you challenging me—with her?"

She looked up at him, steadily. She spoke softly. There was no trace of bitterness, or even accusation, in her tone, but there was something feline in it. "I believe you are going to tear this girl to pieces, if you can. Whether it is because you do not approve the bizarre method someone has used to lift her up, and you merely want to pull her down, I don't know. I think there is something stronger than that in your mind. But I am of the opinion, my dear, that it won't be so easy!"

When she paused, she turned away from him slightly. There was a tinge of color in her pale cheeks. "You are absurd," Brandon said evenly. "And, I think, just a bit plucked. It is a delightful mood. If one of us should make the girl unhappy, I fancy it is more likely to be you than I."

She gave him a bright smile. The color had gone from her cheeks, and she was taunting again. "Now you are accusing me of the possibility of jealousy. I'm never jealous, my friend. Not even, of you. I served you willingly in luring her into my keeping. Teddy Dorminster and Roddy Kenilworth already are devoted to her. Teddy has assured me he's willing to trade all his married women, in one grand bunch, for her. And Roddy declares that she is more refreshing than champagne. So you must admit I'm generous—two of my devotees already are at her feet. And you are hovering about them. I shall—"

She paused. For some reason she decided, suddenly, to both light a cigarette and point toward the cabinet where glasses and bottles were. "A bit of wine, please," she commanded. When he had brought her glass he said:

"You were about to say something interesting. Finish it."

"I was about to add that probably I shall learn some things I really want to know, because of Joanna, but they will be interesting. Come. It is time she made her entrance. Everybody has had just enough to drink to fully appreciate her."

Together they passed into the reception foyer. Through the wide swinging doors, in which palms were barked, strains of dance music floated down from an orchestra hidden on a miniature balcony that crowned one end of the high ceiling room reaching off on either side from the upper landing of a broad, handsome stairway that sloped down majestically into the drawing room itself. "A woman always looks her best when she is descending a stairway," was one of Yvonne's pet assertions. She had had this one especially built into her house.

At the fringe of the dancing crowd in the larger room Dorminster and Roddy Kenilworth talked together, both men searching the throng of guests for their hostesses. Lord Teddy spied her, and Brandon, immediately. Both asked for Joanna when they had hurried to pay their compliments. "A little patience," Yvonne remonstrated. And she admonished them: "There must be no stealing her away for selfish confidences. I want her to know everyone, tonight."

Brandon touched her arm. "Here is someone who will make his own rules, perhaps, about an hour alone with her," he said, indicating a young man, who had just delivered his hat and coat to the doorman and who, evidently a stranger in a strange house, seemed not to know what to do with himself.

Yvonne did not know the newcomer, and looked at him curiously. Like the other men, he was in evening clothes, but in his manner was that intangible something which betrays the one whose full dress is only an occasional ceremony. Always quick with her appraisals Yvonne decided in a flash that the stranger would not be one, if he were cornered, with whom a woman might safely play. She was amused with herself, however, for admitting such an idle reflection, and pursued by it.

Brandon, who had greeted the other, brought him to her for presentation. "Mr. Wilmore," he said. "You have heard me, and, no doubt, Miss Manners speak of him."

PUBLIC SALE SEASON

While auctioneers and their clerks may not prosper as much as in previous years, yet for the community as a whole, it is gratifying to note that "sale season" this year does not indicate a record-breaking number of public sales, by any means, in Adams county.

This means that our farmers are pretty well satisfied with conditions as they are, and that they have decided to "take a chance" at the old stand for another season.

While the past year was better for the farmer than usual in Adams county, it was far from being what it ought to have been to give the farmer the surplus he deserves for his labor. However, the farm outlook for this year is even better than it was this time a year ago, and their is every indication, judging from market reports and agricultural surveys, that the Adams county farmer will continue to increase his income from the crops his land yields.

Advertisements have already begun to appear in The Gettysburg Times of sales scheduled, and auctioneers are sending in their listings for the season. It is a fact worthy of note that practically every sale held in Adams county last year was advertised in this newspaper.

These sale advertisements are generally regarded by farmers and town folk alike, who are looking for bargains, as the best sort of news, and they are widely and carefully read by our subscribers. Those interested in antiques also find it exceptionally profitable to read carefully the items listed by the farmers in their sale advertisements.

One thing is certain, public sales advertised in The Times never fail to attract crowds and usually prove profitable to the person holding the sale and the buyers alike.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

THE SONG OF ENOUGH

I'm getting along, with a bit of a song
And a bit of a smile for my neighbor.

I've managed to grin, with the little I win
Day by day as the bit from my labor.

Time was in the past I stood often aghost
As the storms of despair swept around me,

But my ship, although small, bravely weathered them all
And nothing I've dreaded has downed me.

I've not had the luck which some others have struck.

I've neither been famous nor wealthy,
But I've always had meat when I wanted to eat

And I thank the good Lord I've been healthy.

Some things I have missed on the mil-lionaire's list
But the friends I have made have been true ones;

I have always had suits, shirts and neckties and boots Though I couldn't afford many new ones.

I'm getting along, just as one of the throne,

Day by day I have worked for my money,
But in spite of the care and the burdens I bear

I've had some of life's nectar and honey.
My house isn't large, but love has it
in charge

And in peace and contentment I dwell there,
And all men I defy, to be happier than
I

When a friend puts hand to the bell there.

I'm getting along with a bit of a song

For I've learned what I knew not at twenty,
That enough for each day, with a bit
put away,

For the cares of my old age is plenty.

I have eaten and slept, and at times
I have wept,
I've done all that the Lord lets a man do;

I've made friends on the way, and I venture to say,
That is all that the richest man can do.

JUDGE E. P. MILLER
HIT BY "HAMMER"

Associate Judge E. P. Miller, York street, is the latest "victim" of "The Velvet Hammer" rhyme in a Harrisburg evening newspaper. Concerning Mr. Miller, the versifier says:

"Salute an Adams county judge whose friendship, be it said, may some fine morning serve you in a profitable stead, for should he know your merits
when you're brought before the bar, he may not speed you on so fast nor send you up so far. He's busy with his second term, which means, you wisely wot, the voters wrote approval on the justice which they got.

"A Lutheran and elder who can counsel, rein and rule, he helps the operations of St. James' Sunday School. He's often been from Gettysburg convention delegate to councils by his church convened, both national and state. He used to live in Abbottstown; to Gettysburg he went when William Howard Taft was just becoming president.

"He's in a number of concerns for banking and finance, as well as boosting Gettysburg's industrial advance.
A neutral in the war of words with courtesies so thin (who knows if California or Florida will win?), he joins the winter exodus to either chosen spot, for both have balmy dates which Pennsylvania has not.

William Harman, and daughter,
Ethel and Paul Ben, of Brysonia, spent an evening recently with Mr.
and Mrs. Reuben Showers, and family.

LOCAL MEN TALK
AT LITTLESTOWN
BANQUET MONDAY

275 Fathers and Sons Attend Affair; Special Musical Program Is Rendered.

The first Fathers' and Sons' banquet of the series being conducted by the Lutheran churches of Adams county, was held at Littlestown, Monday evening. Two hundred and seventy-five fathers and sons attended the affair. It was the largest affair of its kind ever held in Littlestown. It was also one of the most successful of the series of fourteen being held. The participants gathered in Methodist Hall at 6:30 o'clock.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's Lutheran church served the banquet. The menu was as follows: Roast chicken with filling, mashed potatoes, cold slaw, salad, green peas, celery, pickles, baked ham, brick ice cream, homemade cake and coffee. The tables were beautifully decorated with potted plants in bloom and cut flowers.

The orchestra of St. Paul's Sunday School furnished music for the banquet. The program being used at all the banquets was carried out with the Rev. David J. Kammerer as toastmaster. The Rev. J. I. Hummer, pastor of the Littlestown charge, took part in the program.

Those On Program

The speakers were as follows: The Rev. O. C. Dean, Hanover, delivered the first address on the subject, "The Relation of Father and Son in the Business of Christian Life." Professor Thomas Cline, of the department of English at Gettysburg College, delivered the second address on "What Kind of Education Should We Give Our Sons?" The Rev. Dr. A. R. Wentz, professor of church history in Gettysburg Theological Seminary, delivered the third address taking as his subject, "The Claims of the Christian Ministry Upon the Youth of Our Church." The Rev. S. F. Snyder, secretary of Gettysburg College, had charge of the registration. In all the banquet reflected great credit upon the management and the pastors and people of the Littlestown churches.

Chambersburg Banquet

The next banquet of the series was held Tuesday evening at Chambersburg. The addresses were delivered by President Hanson of Gettysburg College, the Rev. Dr. Herbert Allen-man, D. D., of the seminary, and the Rev. O. C. Dean, Hanover. The Rev.
Dr. Henry Anstadt, Chambersburg, was the toastmaster.

The churches represented at the Littlestown banquet were: St. Paul's, Littlestown; St. John's near Littlestown; St. Luke's, near White Hall, and Grace church, Two Taverns.

Telsa Foretells
Wonders Of Radio

New York, Jan. 27.—Application of radio principles will enable people, by carrying a small instrument in their pockets, to see distant events like the sorcerer of the magic crystal of fairy tales and legends, Nikola Tesla, electrical inventor, predicted Tuesday.
Mr. Tesla, who on several occasions has tried to communicate with the planet Mars made his prediction in an interview published yesterday.

"We shall be able to witness the inauguration of a president, the playing of a world's series game, the ha-voo of an earthquake or a battle
just as though we were present," Mr.
Tesla said.

"Perhaps the most valuable application of wireless energy will be the propulsion of flying machines subject to radio control. International boundaries will be largely obliterated and a great lished in the current issue of Colt and harmonious existence of the nations."

Mr. Tesla also predicts that the world's internal heat would be tapped
as a reservoir for industrial power.

MARYLANDER

dent Lincoln arrived in at Gettysburg
when he made his speech.

"It has been stated that Capt. John W. King saw the presidential train pass through Baltimore enroute to Gettysburg, but that Capt. King, a prominent leader of the Grand Army of the Republic, was not willing to vouch for the authenticity of the claims made for the old coach.

"It has never been claimed by me or by the veteran employees of the Western Maryland Railway, that President Lincoln rode through Baltimore in this coach. The facts as I understand them are that the only way to reach Gettysburg from Washington by rail, was through Baltimore via the Northern Central Railway to Hanover Junction and thence to Gettysburg by what was then known as the Hanover, Hanover Junction and Gettysburg Railway which ran from Gettysburg down through Hanover to Valley Junction and thence to Hanover Junction, the latter portion of this railway between Valley Junction and Hanover Junction, being to all intents and purposes, at the present time abandoned, except as to operation several times a week as a means of holding the franchise.

"The story of Lincoln's ride as I have it, was that he came to Hanover Junction on the Northern Central Railroad and then changed cars to the H. H. J. and G. Railroad for Gettysburg, riding in the old coach in question. This latter railroad undoubtedly offered a contrast from the one he had just left at Hanover Junction and in all probability his ride from that point to Gettysburg was somewhat slower and perhaps more monotonous and which was perhaps the condition surrounding his making notes on an old envelope and from which notes he delivered the memorable speech.

Authenticity Is Correct

"With further reference to the statement of Mr. Prowell of the Hanover car shops, it may be true that there was a sister coach of the one in question, but undoubtedly one of these coaches was destroyed many years ago for at the time the story was handed down to me there was only the one coach in existence and this was a number of times pointed out to me by many of the veteran railway conductors as being the one in which President Lincoln rode.

"I failed to mention that during my father's long career with the Western Maryland Railway, as a small youngster and in fact until I grew to the age of 12 or 14 years, he frequently took me along on his trips over various parts of the road and explained many of its points of interest and his-

Says Treasurers
Borrowed Money
From Depositories

Harrisburg, Jan. 27.—Charges that Charles A. Snyder and Harmon Kephart, former state treasurers, had borrowed thousands of dollars from state depositories without furnishing adequate security while they occupied the treasurer's office were made Tuesday by Governor Pinchot.

The Governor sent a letter to the House and Senate banking committees, sitting in joint session to hear arguments on proposed changes in the banking and building and loan laws. The committee, however, refused to read the letter and thus withheld it from the legislative records. Senator Morris Einstein, acting chairman of the Senate committee, announced that the letter would be considered later in connection with discussion of banking legislation.

Mr. Snyder, now a special deputy auditor general, said Tuesday night that the Governor had violated Section 12 of the act governing the administration of the banking department in making public such information as he incorporated in his letter.

M. E. Home For Aged
Is Swept By Fire

Altoona, Jan. 27.—Fire, thought to have been caused by a defective flue, damaged the Methodist Home for the Aged of the Central Pennsylvania Conference, located at Tyrone, Monday night. The loss is set between $100,000 and $125,000. Volunteer firemen and citizens of the borough assisted in taking the ninety-two aged guests from the burning structure without injury.

Nine guests of the home who were at the infirmary at the time of the fire were brought to Altoona hospitals.

"It was on such trips as these that I became well acquainted with many of the old conductors whom I respected most highly and from whom I ascertained many facts including the history of the Lincoln coach.

"In my personal opinion there is no doubt whatever but what the old coach now in question is the one with the historic connection and I might suggest that if any of the survivors of the families of the late J. M. Hood or Conductor Cooksey could be interviewed, on this subject, some additional information might be obtained.

"If there is any way which I can throw any additional light on this subject, I will be glad to do so."
"P. W. T. Loy."

The man who thought a buggy was good enough

In the old days, a solid, conservative citizen might sniff and tell you he didn't read advertising.

He didn't think so much of the horseless carriage, either.
The telephone was newfangled, and an insult to the United States mails.

As for radio, aeroplanes, wireless photography—if they had been born then, he probably would have thought them a bit immoral.

But he's changed. He's been educated. His point of view has been made broader and more modern. He has been civilized—by the automobile, the telephone, radio, advertising.

Every single one has opened up new paths for him, taught him new things. Advertising, especially. Advertising tells him the newest things to wear, the best things to eat. Advertising tells his wife
how to make a home up to date and attractive.
Advertising tells him the prices to pay for things he buys,

SIX SAVED FROM OCEAN FREIGHTER

German Steamer Rescues Six Members of Crew of Disabled British Vessel Tuesday.

New York, Jan. 27.—Six men were rescued Tuesday night from the disabled British freighter Laristan, which since Monday night has been lying in a raging sea off Halifax, N. S. The men were taken off by the German steamer Bremen, which had been standing by for several hours.

"Picked up six men off S. S. Laristan," read a wireless message from the Bremen. "Twenty-four men still aboard. Bremen standing by unable to render assistance at present owing to heavy seas."

The steamer Reindeer is being held in readiness at Halifax, to go to the assistance of the disabled freighter as soon as storm conditions permit.

Antiope In Great Peril
A wireless message to the Associated Press from Commander Fried, of the United States Liner President Roosevelt, stated that signals aboard the British freighter Antiope, which has been battling the Atlantic gales since Sunday, indicated that its ability to keep afloat was doubtful. The message stated:

"Stood by the Antiope throughout the night in snow, rain and sleet squalls and high seas. Maneuvered since daylight for positions favorable to a rescue, but the sea too rough to get line aboard. At 4 p. m. launched an empty lifeboat, which drifted alongside Antiope, but men could not reach it. The boat was later seen to capsize empty.

Every one goes astray, but the least imprudent are they who repent the soonest.

SENATOR DIES
IN HARRISBURG

Allegheny County Solon Collapses During Committee Meeting and Dies Few Minutes Later.

Harrisburg, Jan. 27.—Senator John P. Harris, of Allegheny county, collapsed in the House late Tuesday afternoon and died a few minutes later in an anteroom of Governor Pinchot's office.

Heart lesion was the cause of death. The Senator had been suffering from incipient bronchitis for the last three weeks. He had taken upon himself the Pinchot leadership in the Senate and refused to remain away from the capitol for medical treatment.

His death was dramatic and threw the House into terrified excitement. Just a few moments before his collapse he had engaged in a vigorous debate with J. Lee Patton, counsel for the Philadelphia Republican City Committee, on the merits of the administration election reform bills.

The Senator was sitting as a member of the Senate election committee, in joint session with the House committee, for argument on the Pinchot measures. Representative Franklin Spencer Edmonds, Philadelphia, succeeded Patton on the floor and was about to address the committee.

Struck His Head In Fall

There was a crash and Senator Harris was seen to fall from his chair. He struck his head on the base of the rostrum. He was unconscious. His efforts to breathe were plainly audible to those in the front of the House.

Fellow Senators carried him to a small room near the executive offices. Representative John B. Critchfield, Clinton, and Senator George Woodward, Philadelphia, both physicians, went to his assistance, and Dr. Charles H. Miner, state health commissioner, was summoned. The Senator lived but a short time and a crowd in the hall of the House was notified of his death. The committee hearing was adjourned at the time the Senator collapsed.

When the death was announced, Public Service Commissioner Richard W. Martin, a former city solicitor of Pittsburgh, who has been sponsored politically by Senator Harris, collapsed. He was carried into the Governor's office where he was shortly revived.

HE WON THE BET

"I was skeptical of all medicine and doctors. A friend advised me to take Mayr's 'one dose will convince' and assured me it had cured him of his stomach trouble. I didn't take any stock in it and he bet me $50 that it would be equally successful in my case. He won the bet." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded, at Peoples Drug Store and druggists everywhere.—adv.

PUBLIC HEARING ON LIQUOR LAW

Friends and Foes of Prohibition in Harrisburg to Discuss Enforcement Measures.

Harrisburg, Jan. 27.—Friends and foes of prohibition are here today for the public hearing before the Senate and House Law and Order Committees on prohibition enforcement measures pending in the Legislature.

Five bills on the subject, one of the eight included in Governor Pinchot's call for the extraordinary session, are before the Legislature. Two sponsored by the administration have as their objects the drying up of alleged wet spots. One of the other two would make Pennsylvania an oasis by permitting manufacture and sale of 3.75 per cent beer, another would wipe out all existing prohibition laws, placing enforcement solely with the Federal authorities, and another would permit home manufacture of wine.

Inspect Breweries

The administration bills would permit inspection of breweries and distilleries by giving the state additional supervisory powers through creation of an alcohol permit board. Persons manufacturing, developing or storing cereal beverages and alcoholic liquors would come within the supervision of the acts and would be required to obtain permits at a fee of $100 annually. Permittees' places of business would be open to official inspection at all times and power of revoking licenses would rest with the board, although appeal from their decisions would be granted. The bills do not affect physicians, druggists, food manufacturers, legitimate makers of proprietary medicines or flavoring extracts. The bills were the composite idea of the administration, Governor Pinchot and representatives of various organizations working under the name of the "united dry" committee.

Opposed to the administration enforcement measures is the bill of Senator Schantz, Lehigh, wiping out all state enforcement legislation and placing the responsibility, for this work on the Federal authorities. Among the laws which this act would abolish is the Pinchot enforcement measure of 1923 known as the Snyder-Armstrong act.

Legalize Beer

The other measures to liberalize present enforcement laws are bills that would legalize the sale and manufacture of 3.75 per cent beer and the manufacture and use of cider and fruit juices in private dwellings. The 3.75 beer measure was introduced in the House by Representative Stavitski, Luzerne. It would give the court of quarter sessions in each county authority to grant licenses for the sale or manufacture of beer. However, stores in which groceries are being sold would be excluded from those able to secure licenses. Violation of the bill would result in a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for more than a year, or both.

Under provisions of the measure introduced by Representative Sowers, Philadelphia, fruit juices and cider aged and fermented by natural process would be allowed to be made in homes for private use.

The secret of being tiresome is in telling everything. —Voltaire.
